Every Million Comes Handy Každý milion dobrý

Vibrant lady Irena Ditrichová owns a large prosperous firm with subsidiaries abroad. After being involved in a serious car crash she decides to sell the firm and use the proceeds for supporting people, total strangers to her, who have found themselves in difficult life situations. But her son Jaroslav – and even more his very materialistic wife Jolana – are far from happy about her decision. Jaroslav, till then a man of integrity and loving son, thus unexpectedly finds himself between the millstones of two dominant women, and is facing a fateful dilemma. Should he just watch his mother handing round millions which were supposed soon to fall into the lap of his family, or succumb to his wife's pressure and have his mother declared legally incapacitated? Surprising it's Jaroslav's son Lukáš who becomes his opponent: he asks for help lawyer Nebeský, Granny's friend of long standing. During the court hearing this skilful professional develops an essential reflection: is it possible to diagnose a person approaching the end of her life who absolutely freely and in good faith decides to hand round her money as suffering from dementia? But during the unexpected conflict with his mother Jaroslav overlooks one important fact: if he opts to act against his mother, in all likelihood he will lose her for good. He realises his mistake, but too late. Nevertheless, under the influence of unforeseen circumstances, the voice of his conscience does win in the end. Yet the question remains – will his mother, a person of high principles, and now moreover emotionally harmed, ever forgive him the way he's acted...?
