Little Man (Malý Pán)

A classical puppet film, with the story set in a real forest environment, presented in a manner encouraging children's imagination. Little Man lives happily in his small world, and as long as he has enough noodles, there's nothing he scrambles for. But he dreams, and as we know, dreams may cause problems: they don't let people (small and big alike) in peace. When the Little Man wakes up, to his surprise he finds that there's something missing in his life. So he leaves his cosy home (however reluctantly), and sets out on a journey which, he hopes, will help him get to the root of the problem. Who knows what's awaiting him at its end?
